

Work on Historic Buildings

General Overview

At G.L. Frost Architecture, historic buildings are valued for the contribution they continue to make in our communities, respected for the craftsmanship that designed and built them to withstand the test of time, and seen as an attribute to benefit those who use them now and will use them in the future.

Whether it is a building on the National Register of Historic Places or historically significant to the municipality of its location, we take the time required in all circumstances to ensure a positive restoration, re-use or reconstruction.

G.L. Frost Architecture has experience with various historic construction types and materials allowing for better understanding of possible building reuse. We aim to ensure that the buildings on which we work will continue to stand the test of time and maintain their importance both historically and functionally for the towns in which they serve.
